It's great to see you again. In the last module, you learned about social and organizational psychology, which will make you much more effective leader of agile transformation. In this module, you will learn how to create a team-working agreement, build an empathy map, and gain a foundational knowledge of Scrum. In the previous modules, we discussed that agile mostly is a broader concept related to change resilience and the ability to thrive in a rapidly changing environment. In this module, we will be applying agile principles and philosophy in a literal management sense. In addition, we will be focusing on Scrum as one of the available frameworks for solving complex problems, with many unknowns, and a high level of uncertainty. Let's get started
